Sorry to interrupt, it seems you're busy with dome douchebag, but I'd like to ask what you think about the politics of the PFLP.

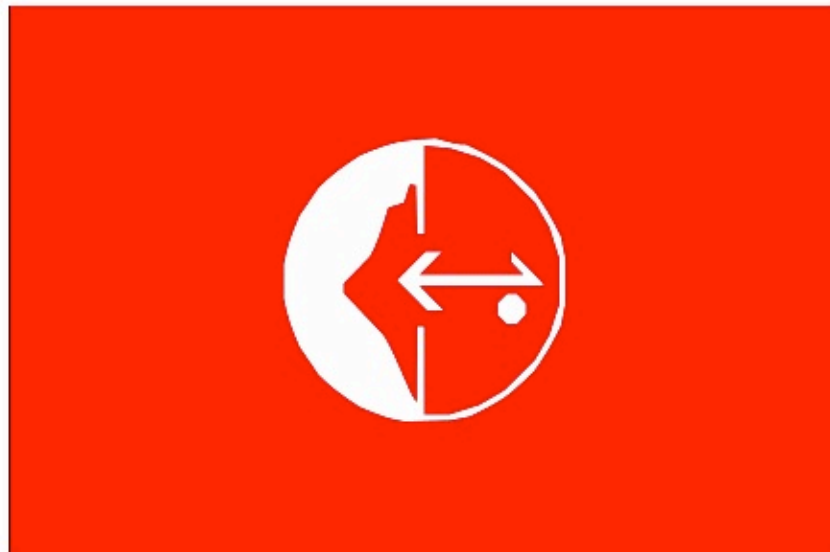

It's fine, I tend to take a while to reply to asks anyways :x

BUT, when it comes to the PFLP, my opinions are a bit complex. I will say, however, that between all the various Palestinian Factions, I support and identify with the PFLP the most.

This support is not unconditional, however, as there are several things I do disagree with [mostly recent developments that I could go into further if you would like], but for the most part, I support them.

I love the fact that they bring together both Palestinian Muslims and Christians [it was even founded by a Christian] and that they would support a secular Palestinian state that allows the freedom of religion and focus on equality. I love Leila Khalid, Ghassan Kanafani, Ahmad Sadaat and George Habash.

Also, their flag is the coolest compared to the flags of the other factions
