

Rutgers University New Brunswick mentioned in new study on academic boycotters and campus antisemitism

November 15, 2017

Dear Chancellor Dutta,

I wanted to share with you AMCHA Initiative's new report, "The Impact of Academic Boycotters of Israel on U.S. Campuses," which mentions Rutgers University New Brunswick.

I know you are already familiar with the way in which academic boycotts violate the basic tenets of academic freedom if implemented, as Rutgers University has made its position clear on the issue following the American Studies Association's resolution to impose an academic boycott on Israel:

"While Rutgers affirms the right of faculty, students, and associations to express their own political and intellectual viewpoints, we believe that academic boycotts fundamentally violate the principles of academic freedom and the free exchange of knowledge and ideas...Rutgers, The State University of New Jersey, joins peer institutions -- including fellow members of the Association of American Universities (AAU) -- in rejecting the American Studies Association's boycott of Israeli institutions of higher education."

What you may not be aware of, however, and what we wanted to share, is new research that demonstrates the extent to which the on-campus implementation and advocacy of an academic boycott of Israel directly harm American students and faculty at U.S. universities. AMCHA's new study, which can be found here, investigates these harms.

Our results strongly suggest that at least some faculty who have signed petitions or statements in support of an academic boycott of Israel are bringing their anti-Israel sentiments and support for BDS to campus through their department's sponsorship of events with pro-BDS speakers. These events, in turn, significantly increase the likelihood of on-campus acts of anti-Jewish hostility such as assault, harassment, destruction of property and suppression of speech. Specifically, the study found that pro-BDS faculty were between five and twelve times more likely to sponsor events with BDS-supporting speakers, and schools that hosted these events were twice as likely to have acts of anti-Jewish hostility.

The report has been covered in several media outlets, including The Washington Free Beacon, The Jerusalem Post, Mosaic Magazine, Algemeiner, Jewish Press, Arutz Sheva, and Education Views, among others.

I would be happy to discuss the report in more detail at your convenience. Please feel free to contact me with any questions.

Sincerely,

Tammi Rossman-Benjamin

AMCHA Initiative, Director
www.AMCHAinitiative.org

To see the full report: <https://amchainitiative.org/wp-content/uploads/2017/10/Faculty-Report.pdf>

CC: Governing Board Chair William E. Best
President Robert Barchi
Provost Lily Y. Young
Executive Dean of Arts & Sciences Peter March
Dean of Social & Behavioral Sciences Richard Schroeder
Dean of Humanities Michelle Stephens